1. Claims 1-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as containing subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention.

Within the specification and claims, it is not clear if the recited hardness values correspond to the durometer A scale. Clarification with respect to the way the hardness values are represented is requested. If the values are represented in accordance with a foreign standard, then an English translation of the standard is required. The means of determining the hardness must be clearly set forth within the specification.
